Michaelina Frackleton, fondly known as Micky, is the sole proprietor of InterPathway Wellness in Amesbury, MA, specializing in lymphatic health and oncology care. With over 22 years of experience in the wellness industry and healthcare, Micky has distinguished herself academically with Dean's List honors, graduating with Highest Honors, and becoming a member of the Phi Theta Kappa International Honor Society.

Her passion for lymphatic health was ignited when she became a Certified Lymphatic Therapist, a role that has since become the cornerstone of her career. Her dedication to advocating for the lymphatic community has led her to participate in various organizational and educational endeavors, including efforts in Washington, D.C., where she had the privilege of meeting Kathy Bates.

A significant milestone in her career was initiating the first Lymphatic Symposium on the Seacoast of New Hampshire in 2020, titled "Awareness, Advances, and Advocacy."

Micky remains deeply committed to the lymphatic and oncology community. She has volunteered her time to provide massages for the Pan Mass Challenge (PMC) in support of the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute and has served as an Ambassador for the National Lymphedema Network at past conferences. She has also facilitated the NLN's Clinical Focus Group Private Practice and currently the Patient Support.

Outside of her professional achievements, Micky is a U.S. Air Force veteran, happily married for 35 years, and the proud parent of two incredible adult children. She enjoys traveling, music, and embraces all-around good fun and harmless merriment.
